“ There are so many things to be said about Dad. He taught me how to ride a bike, helped me with homework, taught me how to bowl and golf. He intimidated me when I was young and made me laugh when I was older. We got drunk making garlic spaghetti and burned up a blender or two making lots of margaritas with Dora! He made me cry by eating my black licorice that I was saving, but made us laugh at the hospital when he stuffed licorice in his mouth before we could take it away. I will miss his smile, his laugh, dumb jokes and his pull my finger bit. I know he is in a better place. I imagine he's already had a tee time with Uncle Manny, Rudy and other friends that have passed before him. I love with very much Dad!
