“ I have known Lou since we were eight years old. We were the best of friends, not only best of friends, we considered ourselves brothers. We shared homes. We were always involved in sports together. You could always find us either riding bikes, making bike jumps in the dirt, hanging out down at the creek, typical stuff brothers do. Sometimes we found ourselves getting in quite a bit of trouble but we always found a way out. We shared our good times and bad. No matter how much distance or time passed we we were always there for each other. In our later years, even though we didn't live near, I could always pick up the phone and call Lou, we never missed a beat. He was a kind friend to all and a hard-worker. Lou loved his family with a passion. My memories with Lou will always be cherished, he will be missed something terrible. I love you Brother, until we meet again my friend, Don Showers

“ Luis, or Jr as we called him, was my little brother. He was two years younger than me, and before age 10, we were inseparable. We grew up climbing trees, riding bikes, and playing baseball every day in the summer. Jr was a Roberto Clemente fan and had a Pirates hat he would always wear. One year, my parents gave Jr and I a pony for Christmas. We were confused, we had never asked for a pony, but soon we were responsible for a large animal that was completely wild. We named him Clyde and would take turns trying to ride him, but would get bucked off him repeatedly. We were both relieved when our parents finally decided to board him at a farm. Our childhood was filled with cats, dogs, puppies, building tree forts, exploring the Napa creeks and running wild on an acre of land. I hope his spirit is roaming the forests and heavens now as freely as he did as a boy.
